A Brief History of the Stritch School of Medicine

Loyola University of Chicago was founded in 1870 and moved from Chicago's west side to what is now the Lake Shore Campus in 1909.

Recognizing the need for a strong medical school, Loyola affiliated itself with Illinois Medical College in 1909 and with Bennet and Reliance Medical Colleges the following year. In 1915, the control of this loose organization was passed to the University trustees and became the Loyola University School of Medicine.

A home for Loyola's medical school was chosen in 1917 with the purchase of the old Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery building on South Walcott Avenue across the street from Cook County Hospital. Loyola's efforts to improve its medical school facilities were limited by a lack of funds until the 1940s when Samuel Cardinal Stritch lent his name to an annual fund raising dinner that has become the main source of continuous financial support for the medical school. In his honor, Loyola renamed its medical school: the Stritch School of Medicine.

With new-found funds and Cardinal Stritch's encouragement, Loyola began planning for the construction of a new medical school building. Several sites were considered before the University decided on a site in Maywood just adjacent to the Hines Veterans Administration Hospital. Official construction on Loyola University Medical Center was begun in 1965 and by 1969 the new medical school was in operation. In honor of a generous benefactor, the new teaching hospital was named Foster G. McGaw Hospital of Loyola University.

As the demand for medical care has grown, Loyola has expanded to meet the need. The first patients walked through the doors of the new Mulcahy Outpatient Center in 1981. In 1986 a new nine story building, the Russo Surgical Pavillion was added to the medical center complex. In the same year, Loyola was designated as a Level I Trauma Center for the State of Illinois. Two years later the Loyola Lifestar Helicopter Emergency Medical System was fully in operation. The state-of-the-art Emergency Care Facility was completed in 1991.

The 125,000 square foot Cancer Center opened in September 1994 and was renamed the Cardinal Bernadin Cancer Center in 1996 in honor of the late Joseph Cardinal Bernadin who received his medical care at Loyola University Medical Center.

The new Stritch School of Medicine building is scheduled to open in June of 1997 at the cost of more than $45 million. The continuous growth and improvement of the Loyola University Medical Center has resulted in the fulfillment of Samuel Cardinal Stritch's vision: the creation of a major medical center that is ever-changing to better serve the needs of the community.

“...two of the score of elements which may make or mar your lives - which may contribute to your success, or help you in the days of failure.

In the first place, in the physician or surgeon no quality takes rank with imperturbability... coolness and presence of mind under all circumstances, calmness amid storm, clearness of judgement in moments of grave peril, immobility, impassiveness, or, to use an old and expressive word, phlegm...

...In the second place, there is a mental equivalent...equanimity... Stand up bravely, even against the worst. Your very hopes may have passed on out of sight...you may be left to struggle in the night alone. Well for you, if you wrestle on, for in persistency lies victory, and with the morning may come the wished-for blessing...Even with disaster ahead and ruin imminent, it is better to face them with a smile and with the head erect, than to crouch at their approach.”

Success lies
 Not in how well-known you are.
 But how well-respected...
 Not in your power to take
 But in your willingness to give.
 It is measured
 By the height of your aspirations,
 The breath of your vision.
 The depth of your convictions.
 Do not look
 To the changing opinions of others
 For news of your success.
 Word comes in the small voice
 You hear from within
 At the end of the day,
 Knowing you have done your best.
 This is the only success that matters.

Lip Sync

At the end of our First Year we showed our gratitude to our Big Brothers and Sisters in the Class Of 1996 through the art of lip sync. The participants were the few, the proud, the ataxic. Glenn and John, the victors of the Lip Sync, wowed the audience with their 70s interpretive dance. Walt flew us to the moon with his swinging Sinatra cover. Catherine, Jen, Grace and Michelle received "three snaps" for their rendition of "Never Gonna Get It." Gaile and Linda showed Lance, Kurt, Bryan and Burt a time they will never forget! Finally, Dave led his beautiful hardbodies, Walt, Brian and Bryan, in a sexy song that was simply irresistible. Fun was had by all and the Class of 1996 urged us to keep our day jobs!

St. Lucia

For those fourth-years lucky enough to receive this rotation, St. Lucia offered Loyola medical students the opportunity to play doctor in paradise. Loyola's affiliation with St. Jude's Hospital began in 1984 and each year roughly 24 fourth-years make the journey to the sunny island nation in the Caribbean.

Despite having time for "fun in the sun," the students work quite hard. The experience at St. Jude's provides students and physicians alike the opportunity to brush up on their physical diagnosis skills and to learn the true meaning of "cost-effectiveness."

Memories of nights spent chatting and playing euchre, shopping in the open market and the warmth of the St. Lucian people will be cherished forever by those members of the Class of 1997 who visited this tropical island.

Volunteers from all over the world come to serve at St. Jude's Hospital in St. Lucia.

Volunteers demonstrate the proper use of the "halitosis stethoscope."

Can you match the lab coat with the rotation?

Match Day

March 19, 1997- the long awaited Match Day. In a process unique to the medical profession, medical students across the country discover where they will spend the next three to seven years of their lives.

Four long years of studying and learning the art of medicine culminated in the opening of one envelope at 11:00 CST. For the Loyola students, this meant gathering with faculty, family members and classmates at the Playhouse in Forest Park.

on and Stephanie joyously celebrate the turn to their homeland, Ohio.

The day began with a class meeting, which was followed by the distribution of the envelopes. One by one, each student was handed an envelope that contained his or her destiny.

After what seemed to be an eternity, all the students received their envelopes. Around the room could be seen a wide range of emotions, including shock, elation, disappointment, and relief. No matter what the news inside the envelope, all students agreed that they were glad it was over. A new and exciting segment of their life was about to begin.

Kevin Brenner shares a moment with Dean Winship during the distribution of the envelopes.

Steve, Gigi and Pete smile bravely as they nervously await "the news".

Craig and Jenny wait patiently as Dean Rainey searches for envelopes P-Q in the trunk of his car.

Students take time out from break-dancing in broken glass to pose for a celebratory Match Day photo.

U.S. medical school seniors and international students find out what teaching hospital they will attend and the area they will be trained in.

'Match Day' just what the doctor ordered

By Annie Sweeney
TRIBUNE STAFF WRITER

The Playhouse bar in Forest Park was noisy and full of chatter Wednesday just after 11 a.m., and Tracy Boykin was looking for a quiet spot.

She found one just off the kitchen. Cell phone in shaky hand, the Loyola University of Chicago Stritch School of Medicine senior pounded out call after call after call with one message for friends, family and answering machines all over: "Emory in Atlanta, Emory in Atlanta! I'm going to Emory in Atlanta, baby!"

Wednesday was "Match Day" for the 13,500 U.S. medical school seniors and 3,400 international students who turned out at bars and in university auditoriums—at the exact same time (11 a.m. Chicago time)—to receive an envelope with one line of critical news: what U.S. teaching hospital they will attend for their medical residency and what area they will be trained in.

The matches are made through a nationwide computer program that pairs students and hospitals, according to the preferences of each.

Match Day is graduation day and the NFL draft all in one. It brings to a close four years of grueling medical school work, but also marks the transition from medical books to the medical profession.

A first-choice match is coveted. That's why Boykin's excitement Wednesday was a bit curious. Emory University, it turns out, was her second choice.

Boykin said that after she interviewed at Harvard University, she could not pass up the chance to be matched with the impressive Ivy League school.

Loyola University of Chicago Stritch School of Medicine seniors Catherine Aleman (from left), Erin Shanks and Grace Tandoc celebrate getting their first residency choices Wednesday.

But the thought of attending Emory University, the prestigious black school in the South, made it the "heart" choice for a black woman who plans to one day be the U.S. surgeon general.

"All my life [because] my family is from Mississippi, I have wanted to move South," said Boykin, a Chicago native. "Emory is a great institution."

Boykin, who grew up wanting to be a doctor at Cook County Hospital, will be training in emergency room medicine. "I'm from the South Side of Chicago," she said, getting serious for one moment to explain her choice. "Enough said."

The fun of Match Day might be as much about how the students get the news as it is finding out where they're going.

Loyola students started gathering at the Playhouse about 10 a.m. Just before 11 a.m., Associate Dean Michael Rainey explained the procedure: The group of 125 students would line up at tables around the room in alphabetical order to collect their envelopes and open them separately.

"This is a personal matter between you and your envelope," Rainey said.

Student John Kiriklakis, 25, of Chicago, was happy to find that he will return to Loyola to train in internal medicine. He also earned his undergraduate degree at the school.

"I'm just Loyola through and through," Kiriklakis said.

Other Match Day events were more free form.

Students from the University of Illinois at Chicago College of Medicine gathered at the hip Bossa Nova bar on Clybourn Avenue where, one by one, 157 names were called out. Students came to the front to collect their envelope and opened it in front of their classmates.

"If you're happy, you scream and shriek," said university spokesman Danny Chun. "If you're not, you just walk away."

Down at the University of Chicago Pritzker School of Medicine, students host Match Day at the university so that teaching staff at the hospital can join in the celebration, said school spokesman Bill Burton.

Students open the letters simultaneously after they have been handed out one at a time in random order.

Those who are handed theirs first have to wait, although some try and cheat by holding the envelope up to the light. The person called last is rewarded with money collected from the students and teachers—about $200 this year.

"Then they all rip them open at once," Burton said. "Most are pretty well-behaved."

CONGRATULATIONS!

LAURA

The circle of years that included many years of hard work, "fun", and determination! Now a medical degree! May the future bring you much success and happiness.

We are very proud of you! All our love,
Mom, Dad,
Linda and Steve,
Granny

Congratulations!!
Kevin D. Egly, MD

Dear Kevin,

We want you to know how extremely proud we are of you. You are a very special son and brother and you mean everything to us.

Your patients will be blessed to have as caring and compassionate a person as you for their doctor.

We love you and wish you a lifetime of peace and happiness. God bless you today and always.

*All our love,
Mom, Dad, Keith and Kristen*

Dear Roly, remember when?

You barely knew how to swim, yet I was in the deep end of the pool and you asked, "Can I jump in?". You were barely two years old but nevertheless I answered "yes" and you did. That was the beginning of your passion for swimming that brought you to represent your High School.

One of your first baseball games in the peewee league, when one of the opposite team members hit the ball and you caught it. Only to begin running with the ball into the centerfield and the rest of the team after you much like in a football game. When it was time to bat, that plastic T was always in your way. Then again this was only the beginning of a wonderful baseball life where you shined like no other star.

Those college years, oh how I worried and how much I prayed to God to look after you. Especially after one of the many visits to U of I in Champaign, while eating a peaceful meal in a restaurant, some college kids passed by and said "Hi Elvis." To my inquisitive look your friend responded smiling, "Oh that is because of his hip movement when he was dancing on top of the tables at this bar." How about that dreadful first day back to school from summer vacation and into the new Fraternity House? Oh God how I cried. Yet you made it, you actually survived those college years and I was so happy and proud of you.

You have always taken any challenge that life itself or I have thrown at you, not only to meet those challenges, but you have always exceeded my expectations. We are so proud of what you have become A WONDERFUL HUMAN BEING and of what you have accomplished in life.

Good character is more to be praised than outstanding talent. Most talents, are to some extent, a gift. Good character, by contrast, is not given to us. We have to build it piece by piece- by thought, choice, courage, and determination. We are so proud of your fine character.

Our warmest and sincerest congratulations on your enormous accomplishment!!

Dear Kathy,

There once was a man who was noted as one of the best students at his medical school. All his professors said he will become world famous because of his talents. This man's name was Phil Waters. Never hear of him? That's because he gave up. Think about it. By the way, good luck.

That brother of yours
 Brian

Dear Son,

Our family always looked up to a doctor as a supreme being-- and now our son-- Eric Ercole Roselli MD has climbed to that position. No words can describe our feelings of pride.

In our talks with you, Eric, hearing your words of devotion and enthusiasm toward helping humanity makes our emotions swell up with total gratification.

The compassion and the ethics of some of the Loyola U. Medical School faculty are memorable. What is right should always be administratively possible.

Cheers for the entire class of 1997 and their successful hurdling of challenges to graduation.

Congratulations and love to you, Joseph,
on your considerable achievement!

Maria,
*Through the years you have always made us very proud of you. Now, as you graduate from medical school, words could never express how we feel.
 We wish you all the best in everything you do and may your future be filled with all of the happiness, health, and success you are so deserving. We love you very much.*

Love Always,
 Mom and Dad

To My Fabulous Fabiola
*You were told many times that you were named and loved long before you were born. A Chinese sage added the word fabulous to your name. Words limit, but you are a thought of God. To know that you are my daughter, my best friend, the poet with healing hands, is to know grace.
 Now that you have become a medical doctor, you will extend God's love restoring health and peace of mind which are blessings and a gift to humankind.*

Your Mom and Friend, Cristina

Cory,

The path you have taken reflects your caring heart and thoughtful ways. You have been a special gift to our family, touching each of our lives with your love and laughter. We wish you a lifetime of caring, sharing, and happiness. And, as you go, remember that the journey is the reward.

Dear Rajie,
Your special day - graduation from Loyola Medical School - has arrived at last. You've worked so hard and it's wonderful to see you reach your goal! Your success, son, is well deserved, for you are a very caring and sensitive person, and it shows in your dedication to helping others. On May 17th we've seen you take yet another big step in your life - your marriage to Sloan Strink, your fellow classmate. May this be only the beginning of a life that holds great happiness, new opportunities, and a deep personal fulfillment. Our hearts are filled with pride for both of you. Congratulations on your graduation. We love you both very much.

Mom & Dad

Congratulations Doctor Jennifer!

Remember this picture from one of your first dance recitals? You worked so hard practicing your steps in the living room to get them just right. The song you danced to was "High Hopes."

Much has changed since then, but some things don't change. You're still working very hard to get things just right and now you have reached one of your highest hopes.

Oops, there goes another rubber tree plant!

We're very proud of you and we love you,
Mom & Dad, Joe, Jeff & Jessica

To Our Son Bryan,

Words cannot express the joy and happiness we are feeling in our hearts for you today. It is with great pride we congratulate you on your dedication and accomplishments.

Our hopes and prayers for you are expressed in the beautiful words of "On Eagle's Wings -- And He will raise you up on eagle's wings, bear you on the breath of dawn, make you to shine like the sun and hold you in the palm of His hand".

Climb until your dreams come true.

We hope you have enjoyed the 1997 edition of the Caduceus. Many long hours of designing page layouts, cropping pictures and staring into computer screens have resulted in the book you have before you. Completing this monumental project would not have been possible without the time and effort of our yearbook staff and Ron's wife, Stephanie. We also wish to thank Dean Michael Lambesis for his dedication to the yearbook and for his patience and understanding when we fell "a little" behind schedule. Thanks also to the Dean of Students secretaries (especially Gina, who became a permanent fixture on our answering machines), to Wyckoff Studios for the senior portraits and to Mary Powers and everyone at Walsworth Publishing.

Finally, and most importantly, we wish to thank the Class of 1997 for the memories of the last four years. We hope this book helps you to remember your days at Stritch for many years to come.

Congratulations and Best Wishes, Jen and Ron
